ArchiveGrid is an important destination for searching through historical documents, personal papers, and family histories held in archives around the world. Thousands of libraries, museums, and archives have contributed nearly a million collection descriptions to ArchiveGrid. Researchers searching ArchiveGrid can learn about the many items in each of these collections, contact archives to arrange a visit to examine materials, and order copies.

Search:
Enter search term[s] in box on left side of screen. Enclose phrases in quotation marks. Other suggestions for successful searching are listed below the search box.

Results List:

1. Learn more about an item by clicking its title. A new window will open showing details of the item.
2. Use the “Contact Information” link to find out more about the collection containing the item, including phone numbers, email addresses, etc.
3. Archival collections containing more than one item pertinent to your search term will be listed on the left. Click the archive name to view results from that collection.

Locations:
Under the Archives sidebar is a Locations sidebar. Use this to find archival collections by city and state. For example, a search for documents relating to the Alamo resulted in this list of locations in Texas:

NOTE: ArchiveGrid does not provide access to the actual archival materials. Use it to locate items, then contact the owning institution.
