
Search:
- For a simple search, type your search term in the open search window at top right. This will search article headings (similar to a keyword search).
- Click Search.
- The Search window appears on every page view in Grove, so it is easy to begin a new search.
- You may also choose the Advanced Search link, near the Search window.

Results:
- A list of articles relating to your search term will appear.
- The first article will usually be the main dictionary entry for your term. Other articles relating to your term will appear following the lead entry.
- The source for each item in the results list is indicated. You may choose to limit your results to a specific source or type of result by checking the appropriate box in the left toolbar.
- Select an article by clicking on its title.
Article View:
- The article will appear. Longer articles will also include a Table of Contents on the left. You may jump to any section by selecting the link in the contents area. Use the + sign to expand the contents and view sub-headings.

- Use the tabs at the top left of the article to link to related multimedia and other content.
- Use the icons at the top right of the article to toggle highlighting, print, email, or access citation information for the article.

Browse:
Links in the header bar allow you to browse content in alphabetical order.

- Select “Biographies” to browse for biographical information about composers and other musicians.
- Select “Subject Entries” to browse for non-biographical information about terms, instruments, practices, forms, or specific works.

Find Out More:
- From the home page, select items in the right tool box to view tutorials and access topical guides and music history timelines.
